Cookie notice

Like most websites, we use cookies and we have created this cookie notice to let you know what cookies we set and how they work. Please read this notice carefully together with our privacy notices, which set out how and why we collect, store, use and share personal data generally, as well as your rights in relation to your personal data and details of how to contact us and supervisory authorities if you have a complaint.

Who we are

This website is operated by HelloDPO Law Ltd referred to as "HelloDPO Law", "we", "us" or "our" in this notice.

Our website

This cookie notice only relates to your use of our website, www.hellodpo.com.

Links to other websites

Throughout our website we may link to other websites owned and operated by third-parties to, for example, give you information about what charities we support or to link to pages containing useful, data protection related resources and to allow you to share our website content. These other third-party websites may also use cookies or similar technologies in accordance with their own separate cookie notices. For privacy information relating to these other third-party websites, please review their cookie and privacy notices as appropriate.

Social media

We have a social media account page with LinkedIn, which you can access via a link on our website. LinkedIn uses cookies. You can find out about the cookies they set and how to change them here. We would also encourage you to read their privacy notice which can be found here. We also use LinkedIn to advertise our services, which involves the placing of cookies on our website. This is explained further in the "Marketing cookies" section of the table below.

We also have a YouTube channel. YouTube uses cookies. You can find out about the cookies they set and how to change them here. We embed some YouTube videos on our website. When we do this, YouTube sets cookies (with your consent). Details of these cookies can be found in the table below in the "Marketing cookies" section.

What are cookies and what do they do?

A cookie is a small text file which is placed onto your device (e.g., computer, smartphone or other electronic device) when you use our website. We use cookies on our website to record that you have been shown the information about the cookies we set, to distinguish between humans and bots using our contact form so we can reduce spam, to analyse how people interact with our website for statistics and marketing purposes. For example, we may monitor how many visitors we receive, how they access our website (e.g. from a search engine or directly inputting our address) and how long people spend on each page of the site. This information will be used in aggregate to help us to understand how people are using our website so that we can improve it and so that we can review and adapt our general marketing strategy. We also used cookies in relation to advertising our services on LinkedIn.

For further information on cookies generally, including how to control and manage them, visit the guidance on cookies published by the UK Information Commission, www.aboutcookies.org or www.allaboutcookies.org.

Consent to use cookies and changing settings

We will ask for your consent to place cookies or other similar technologies on your device, except where they are essential for us to provide you with a service that you have requested.

You can withdraw consent to the use of cookies or manage cookie preferences by clicking on the paper clip icon at the bottom left corner of the screen on each page of our website, which will take you to the cookie tool. It may be necessary to refresh the page for the updated settings to take effect.

Our use of cookies

The table below provides more information about the cookies we use and why. Reference to a session cookie in the cookie duration column means, the cookie lasts until you log off or close your browser.
